

CHAS-199
BOWMAN HOUSE
Marshall's Corner
Private

early 19th century

A simple, Federal-style frame house, three bays wide and one room deep, and with a single exterior chimney at one end, the Bowman House is architecturally similar to but not as sophisticated as the McDaniel House (CHAS-305). One-story additions at both ends of the house are of 20th century date. In a region where blacks have historically lived in small houses and cabins, until the middle of this century, it is interesting to note that the Bowman House and farm has been owned and occupied by several generations of a black family since the late 19th century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Bowman House is a four part frame structure consisting of a two-story, Federal-style main block with flanking one-story wings. Three bays wide on both side elevations, the main block probably dates from the early 19th century and has a single exterior chimney with stepped shoulders at its east end. It is similar to but not quite as sophisticated as the McDaniel House (CHAS-305) in its architectural styling. A transomed entrance door occupies the first bay from the west end of the south front. It has a cantilevered pedimented hood of more recent date. The two adjacent windows and three second floor windows all frame 6-over-6 pane sash. The north, rear elevation repeats the door placement and fenestration of the front. Later additions cover most of the first and second floor areas of the end elevations; however, there are two narrow windows of 4-over-4 pane sash in the west gable and a single window of like plan in the east gable. The exterior of this part of the house is sheathed with asbestos siding and the roof with corrugated tin.

At the east end of the main block stands a one-story, one room addition of 20th century date. It has a centered door and two windows on the south side, masonry block foundations, asbestos siding and asphalt roof shingles. At the opposite end of the main block is a one and one-half story section, four bays wide on the south front and with a shed dormer on the front slope of the roof. The rear elevation of this portion of the house is a full two-stories in height. At the west end is a one-story, one room, shed roofed extension. Both sections of the west wing are of 20th century date.
